"Everything has beauty but not everyone sees it."

Everything that is of existence in life has its own beauty. For example there are stars like the Sun, that shine so bright that we can't even look directly at it for too long. There is beauty in other forms of existence such as the beauty in being able to love and those feelings being reciprocated back. There is beauty in our ability to learn and to be able to continually grow if we desire to do so.

There is beauty in the trees, and the amazing way that the leaves of trees change colors in Autumn, die off, and in Spring grow back as if they were never gone.

There is beauty in everything that has been or is being influenced by anything that has life. Though there may not always be an explanation that we understand for everything that we go through, life is ultimately one beautiful thing.
