"Great minds have purpose little minds have wishes."

A purpose driven life is a life driven with a motive. If you ever want to be happy you really have to do some soul searching throughout your early years to be able to move towards the life you really want. A purposeful mind is much larger than a mind that is just willing to wish, because not only can it see the impossible, but it can also move close to receiving the impossible.
Just because you have a vision for yourself doesn't at all mean that you are living out your vision. We have to be able to follow who we are on the inside, and the road to becoming who we desire to be will become as clear as day. We aren't all blessed with vision, but those who are must realize that having a wish isn't good enough; we have to be willing to try and live out our dreams.

Source: here