"Never stop doing your best just because one person doesn't give you credit."

— Kamari aka Lyrikal
As we proceed on our daily journeys through life, it is important that we remain encouraged despite if we feel that we are getting enough credit for the things we feel as we do right. When we think about the big picture of life, we realize that everything we do represents our life story in at least some way. Though it is common to get discouraged when we feel as though we aren’t receiving the recognition we deserve, we have to fight against these negative ways of thinking, and continue to push forward anyway.

We all desire to be loved and accepted especially when we are working very hard. But as we learn more and more about life and it's lessons it is easy to see that it should never be our aim to receive recognition from other men, it is only our duty to excel in what we do no matter who sees.
