"The world seems dark and ugly sometimes. But there are still good things in it, and good people."
Despite the fact that there is so much bad in this world, we have to realize that this world is a huge world, and for every bad force, there is a force of good that will outshine its dark counterpart. All that it takes is for a little amount of light, a small amount of energy in any given place that is completely dark to help light up the place. This is significant because it shows us that even though there are a lot of bad people in the world, there are those who live to do as much good to the world as possible.

Don't let you experiences from the past prevent you developing relationships with good people, because having good people in your life is truly a blessing in many facets. Look for the good in humanity, keep a positive attitude, use your discretion, but always remember that not everyone is out to do harm, some are out to bless others.
